ACADEMIC ADVANCEMENT PROGRAM

UCLA Division of Undergraduate Education

The Academic Advancement Program, known on the UCLA campus as AAP, is the nation's largest university-based, multi-ethnic, multi racial, multicultural student diversity program.

- 45th Year
- 5,600 current AAP members (enrolled now)
- Over 53,000 members have graduated from UCLA

AAP Diversity

- * Approximately 63% of AAP students are from historically underrepresented backgrounds (Hispanic/Latino, African American, and Native American).
- * Approximately 51% of AAP students are the first in their family to attend college.
- * Approximately 22% of UCLA undergraduates are AAP members.
- * AAP graduates the highest percentage of historically underrepresented students in the UC system, the CSU system, and among major public research universities in the country.
- * AAP has been recognized as one of the “most creative, successful, and innovative” student retention programs in the country.
